

Randy Anderson Band Returns to the Virgin River Lounge

Swan Song For Singer McCasland

The Randy Anderson Band returned to the Virgin River Lounge on Tuesday, July 27 for a one- week gig.

It will be a last call for female vocalist Kimberly McCasland, who will sing her last song in Nevada during the band's stay.

After eight productive years with the band, McCasland departs on Aug. 1 for her next engagement in Maryland: namely, marriage.

This week's gig will be the debut of McCasland's replacement, vocalist Emerald Yancy, who survived the search to become the band's vocalist.

She has been performing since she was 13 years old.

Yancy will have large boots to fill, as McCasland has been a great part of the band's continued success in lounges throughout Southern Nevada.

McCasland will be sorely missed if the turnout in Las Vegas last weekend is any indication.

Hundreds of fans turned out to present her with gifts and awards at her last performance in Vegas.

Many of the fans present in Las Vegas will be driving north this week to see her final Nevada appearances in Mesquite.

The Randy Anderson Band has been a mainstay on the casino lounge scene in Southern Nevada for more than 20 years.

RAB fans are encouraged to slip on their boots and jeans, head down to the River Lounge, say goodbye to McCasland, and listen to a good country band.

The Randy Anderson Band will perform on Thursday and Sunday from 7 p.m. until 12:45 a.m., and on Friday and Saturday from 8 p.m. until 1:45 a.m.

Admission is free.
